TITAN TRADITION · 1972

Titan Tradition 1971-1978

*It's over now;
seems like yesterday*

We'd just begun to use our eyes to see our hands to touch

our hearts to feel our arms to reach out to...

People...

colours, shapes, sizes

moving,

mixing,

blending,

blurring.

Streams of human life in halls, doors, numbers, rooms and foaming

fluorescent

lights

illuminating dark corners of unborn minds

*Three years
or maybe four...
sometimes too
long
sometimes too short*

*Now come,
and gone forever
in time's mind
but not in mind's time.*

Poem by Sharon Carlson

Principal's Message

The Titan Tradition continues to be a most popular publication. The evidence for this statement is found in the very large number of students who voluntarily subscribe to this yearly record of students and their activities. However, despite its popularity, I wonder how many students recognize the tireless effort and inspiration that a small, enthusiastic group of students expends throughout the year to produce our yearbook.

In a short message it is not possible to enumerate the work of each contributor, but I must take this opportunity to commend Debbie Collins, the yearbook editor, and her staff for their talent and hard work.

Finally, this must surely be the year of "Women's Liberation" in Harry Ainlay, for the positions President of the Students' Union, Graduation Class President and Yearbook Editor are all head by young women, each of whom has done an outstanding job. Well done, ladies! You should look to your laurels, men. because these positions are no longer yours for the asking.

The President's Message

These three years I have spent at Harry Ainlay have been years of learning and growing. I believe that there is more learning to be done in high school than just in the classroom. It is the learning, and growing in character achieved only by being part of something and feeling like you belong. The Student Union has done their best to assist all students in finding their own niche to make the ups and downs of high school more easily handled.

The past year has been the most beneficial for me. Though all has not gone as in a dream, I have had much enjoyment from my experiences and hope I am a better person for having been the President for a year.

I wish to take this opportunity to extend my most sincere appreciation to all students and staff here at Ainlay and to wish the best of luck to the graduation class and to those remaining at Ainlay. Special thanks to those who I have worked closely with this past year, particularly for their understanding and support.

REQUEST

I give to you myself and all that is mine

my shattered dream-prisms my budding love-seeds my broken mirror-eyes
my flooding wine-tears

I do not ask that you

rebuild my prisms or nurture my seeds
or mend my mirrors or stop the wine from flowing

I just ask that you try.

--Sharon Carlson

YOU HAVE THEM

Courage is smiling
and laughing
when the salt of your invisible tears
is corroding your very life away

And realizing that the world still exists outside your own circle of grief and seeing it.

It's listening to other people talking of life and death
when they know nothing and you know all

And not being angry
And not screaming out when Mount Vesuvius is about to erupt and send forth hot flaming words and tears cascading.

And when gentle words
of sympathy
and support are needed for her who loves him more than you could ever conceive
And you have them
This is Courage

--Barb Bell

we ran into the soft green
hills of dreamland
and built
gold dust castles on clouds
in flower fields
with a thrill of joy
we touched blue skies and found
one perfect
white rose

--Donna Wellman

SUNSET EYES

The orange
the blue
and the red rippled falling
as he watched
the sky tick by.
His head was opened and the Table of Contents was listed beneath the skull somebody turned the pages
as he read in the evening sky.

--Tuula Heinonen

SAD SONG IN MY SHOE

There was a song
in the toe
of my red leather shoe it stepped very sadly in minor key A.
when I walked over gravel it spilled in the street and rocks become wet.
I know they had felt my melody leaking
on the cement.

--Tuula Heinonen

ODE TO MATH CLASS

Their minds are a million miles away--
Not here
I can see the glint in their eyes from my place on the window sill in this artificial environment of brick and cement.
The sunlight I see in their eyes is boarded up with scolds.
But they can return soon-- As soon as the hot air has passed.

They are in daisy fields or grassy meadows,
or at book burning,
watching their square roots filter up into the air
And float away forever.
After all,
who needs the factor theorem to make babies?

-- Lee Onisko

in a mirror
of time
an image
shines
and is covered by untouchable glass
that reflects
only what we care to see and the truth
is trapped in dark corners
that take searching to find

Our annual Naiad Contest, though designed along the same lines as the past years', was highlighted with some entertaining differences. Candidates were nominated by the senior class. Those nominees with the ten most nominations were contestants in a week of fun and informative events. One of the candidates was a horse of a different sex, Bob Holmes. His campaigners liberally spread the walls with posters proclaiming the advent of Mens' Lib. Dramatic improvisations, a debate on Womens' Lib., and a fashion show, graced by Bob's marvelous physique, were a few events of the week, capped with a dance where the crowning took place.

MORE "LITERARY"

I AM BEGINNING

I am beginning
to look like a writer my pencils are broken my thoughts uncontrolled my papers scattered.
I would hardly find you today
when I searched
on my cluttered desk:
but this is to be a Christmas poem
a thought
a piece of me
especially for you (you know who you are) they brought gold, frankincense and myrrh to the saviour
I have but one gift to bring to you

--Sharon Carlson

LIFE

Insatiable reasons fill my head as I strive to answer the question why.
The perfect reasons come to mind as I realize the answer is why not

--Rob Griffin

MOON LANDING

Biafrans are as close as we
To the Moon: Except we Have Television sets

--Kimball Day

SKIN

Skin is handy,
Skin is dandy,
Skin can feel like silk or leather It keeps inside
The beauty we hide
And helps keep us together.

--Lee Onisko

ST. VALENTINE

St. Valentine is celebrating again
The time to give to those you love I've thought, but still my educated, efficient brain Can't tell my heart how to send A paper wish to the world.

--Denise Giesbrecht

EARLY SPRING

Fields of white powder, Ashes of old man winter;
Cold in the warm sun.

--Gail C.

WINTER SNOW

Falling softly, lightly, slow; sifting silently, gently down onto the hard frozen ground. Look, peacefully comes the snow.
Huge flakes of white descend in unbroken chains, stifling all sound below, smoothly brushing by in whirlwinds of moving stars. I sit awed inside my window, watching winter magic transform the world outside.
The trees are topped with clumps of white that weigh down every branch, bushes sway and dance with the unaccustomed load, flowers lie under a dusting of snow.
Crowns of feathers adorn fence and roof, grass becomes a carpet of billowing fleece.
The stillness is deafening; it seems as if the whole world is holding her breath.
For a time this snowfall will not be disturbed, no one can be seen to break the spell, chill winds may blow but not on this day, the day of the first winter snow.

--Gail C.

FEAR

I stand here in the middle of the street
Watching the whole world go by
And seeing absolutely nothing
It frightens me
I'm beginning to think it may be because there's absolutely nothing
there to see.
--Lee Phillips

don't imagine i compose these poems myself
i don't they're prepared and stored compactly
in my pen
i buy them at the drugstore five for 49¢
just drop them in either end
will do
the box says but that's not really true actually they can be put in upside down
and then the poems come out backwards but i can't tell which ones are backwards and which ones
aren't
--Susan Crandall

CRAZY POEM

We used to be crazy, we freed puppets and danced long and wild in the blue rainfalls.
Beneath the purpleness of jacqueranda
at the bottom of the garden we were the Counts of Mumpa and wore green stockings on our heads.
Sun-brown and songfull we built houses of seaweed
and licorice-root
for elves and sandpipers.
And in the early white of morning we'd sing a song of leaf-boats. We used to be (these days people tell me I'm) crazy.

--Elspeth

SUN-LESS SCHOOL

On a winter's day, I Get up at seven and Arrive at school at eight.
The sun is not up.

No windows, artificial Lighting all around.
I leave the school
At three.
The sun is down.

Does the Sun still exist?
Not for me.
Only for those in Schools with windows.

--Kimball Day

I DIDN'T KNOW

I didn't know how badly I wanted to stay
'til I tried to go.

--Tanis Wilson

ALONE

Sometimes
I walk the empty streets
listening to the infinite silence and staring at the unseen.

My mind is filled with joy, clutching at all beauty.
Embracing those who pass me and giving my heart to the lonely people I see.

Then I realize the world is still hollow, the unseen and lonely still unnoticed, all silence shattered, the streets empty and forlorn, and I am still alone.

--Rob Griffin

DISHONESTY

Men look at machines

And see nothing.

Not because there's not

Anything to see in Machines but

Perhaps because

There is a perfection in Machines that

Men could never

Ever hope to achieve.

LOVE, I SUPPOSE

Love,

I suppose

is finding the echo of your soul in another's eyes.

Friendship,

I suppose

is finding the echo of your mind in another's words.

Loneliness,

I know is knowing what you're looking for and not being able to find it anywhere but in yourself.

--Lee Phillips

LOVE OF MINDS

love of minds

is the realization of happiness of today.

uniting of souls

is the perfection of love of tomorrow.

--Tanis Wilson

THE QUESTION

To fight or not to fight--that is the question Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the guns and tanks of outraged countries Or take arms against your own and by opposing destroy it.

--Denise Giesbrecht

BROKEN DREAMS

Broken dreams
lie all around me like sharp splinters of glass on the pavement
about my bare feet

And you ask me
why I'm afraid
to take the first step

POEM FOR HALLOWE'EN

AND SIMILAR NIGHTS

Tonight the stars are laughing.
Beware the crucifix on the hill and the milk-maids in the valleys.
Go carefully past the cross roads and leave your windows open.
Neither mock the night
nor whisper its secrets, for tonight there is laughter everywhere.

--Elspeth

A QUESTION UNTITLED

he that once walked on the eastern shore when children became disciples
he that once knew the pain of too full a soul he that was torn on the death cries of human animals-- he that masters spirit; is come
he is come
the prophet
to hold men to a promise
he is come
the child who once washed in an earthly ocean
he is come
who forever wanders
in life
amongst the dying

WHEN SUMMER'S OVER

When summer's over
and sunbaked sand
turns cold,
and ice
swims
in silent lakes
and whispered words
in darkened rooms
become the past and life's summer hearts
beat slower,
avoiding reality--
then there are still two laughing faces
running through memories
--Jean Andruski

BY WAY OF APOLOGY AND EXPLANATION

for some pretty obvious defects in the later pages of this edition of TITAN TRADITION; and for the delay in publishing.

Unforeseen delays prevented the Editorial Staff from completing their work on this edition before the 1971-72 school year ended. The last material came in while we were organizing for 1972-73, after the new school year had started. Only one member of the 1972 staff returned to Ainlay in September, 1972--and great credit is due to DIANE FORBES for a tremendous solo effort to complete work on this edition.

A major mystery of tragic proportions during that period deprived us of material for a large part of this edition. A folder of copy, layouts, photos, artwork and all, simply disappeared! It included, among other things, the Principal's message; and all the winning works from the Poetry Contest--irreplaceable material. While every effort was made to find other examples of the work of the Contest winners, we can't be sure that there have not been oversights.

We sincerely regret this unsatisfactory climax to a great deal of creative hard work by a number of keen and able students--and present the 1972 Yearbook.
